We've raised just over $900,000 since 2016, and this grant will allow us to add a CuddleCot to another hospital. A lot of people don't understand infant loss because they haven't been through it. To them, it's like "Why would you talk about that?" But in another breath, you have to. This kind of change wouldn't be possible without sharing Ashlie's story.

Domestic Abuse Intervention Services (DAIS) is literally saving lives. I have zero doubt that my kiddo and I wouldn't be alive today if it weren't for DAIS and subsequently, the support that AmFam has provided the organization. That impact is being multiplied by my willingness to share my story and skills. It's just so important for people to speak up and ask for help – when you see something, say something.

My goal is that the kids I coach are excelling, being good teammates and having a good team culture – that’s what made me love baseball. Grants like these help Ashwaubenon Youth Baseball keep the cost down for families so that every kid who wants to be involved can be.

I heard someone one day talking about volunteering and I wondered what gift I had that I could give – I love to cook for people. I thought about how I could use my gift and turn it into a blessing for others. A lot of my volunteer work began by reaching out to neighbors to join me, who then reached out to others to join them and so on – it was a chain reaction of people saying they wanted to come over and help.”

Strong Women Strong Girls is truly full circle. It's professionals mentoring college women, who are mentoring girls in elementary school – all in one. Sometimes, people think that in order to make an impact, you have to be giving gobs and gobs of money, but that isn't necessarily the case. There are so many ways that you can make a difference and not even realize it. Give a little bit – you'll see how it changes you as a person, and then it's a snowball effect from there.”

Cancer patients often have to decide between paying their bills or paying for their medication. It's just devastating. If you think that your donation doesn't make a difference, I can introduce you to my mom. She is alive today only because people donated $5, 10, $20 which funded lifesaving research. Every dollar makes a difference, every dollar counts, and every dollar helps bring light to the darkness of cancer.
