NURSES diploma holders who want to study for a degree now have another avenue available to them.

The programme will supplement the 70 places at the existing nursing degree programme which runs foreign university degree courses through university degree courses.

According to Ministry of Health figures, about 20 per cent of registered nurses in the public health-care sector hold degrees. Having a degree will put registered nurses on a fast track to leadership positions, said Professor Karen Luker, dean of the nursing programme.

Students will debate a motion of no confidence. Members will debate a motion of no confidence. The no-confidence motion, which is tantamount to asking them to resign, follows a row over business-class travel for the top leaders.

The ongoing dispute began after some members, led by prominent criminal lawyer Subhas Anandan, senior counsel Wong Meng Meng, wanted the council to end the practice of flying the president, vice-presidents and governing council abroad on a business-class travel policy.

According to Ministry of Health figures, about 20 per cent of registered nurses in the public health-care sector hold degrees. Having a degree will put registered nurses on a fast track to leadership positions, said Professor Karen Luker, dean of the nursing programme.

The ongoing dispute began after some members, led by prominent criminal lawyer Subhas Anandan, senior counsel Wong Meng Meng, wanted the council to end the practice of flying the president, vice-presidents and governing council abroad on a business-class travel policy.