3 full-time courses at SIT next year

The Singapore Institute of Technology (SIT) will offer full-time degrees in infrastructure engineering, information and communications technology and accountancy from next year.

The university, which will soon be officially established as Singapore's fifth university, plans to take in 200 students for the three programmes – the engineering and accountancy courses will take in 75 students each, and the information and communications degree will admit 50.
